

Living the mountains

In Les 3 Vallées, accommodation is part of the journey. It sets the pace, extends the day and invites you to fully settle into the landscape.

Sleep in a village, spend a night in a mountain refuge, enjoy the comfort of a hotel or the freedom of an apartment: everyone finds their own starting point to explore in their own way.

You return after a day outdoors, slow down, enjoy the calm... and already start imagining what comes next.

Sleeping higher up

Spending a night at altitude changes everything. With 11 mountain refuges across the area, the mountains are experienced differently — more intensely, yet more simply.

In the evening, the light softens, silence settles in and the peaks gradually empty. In the morning, the air feels fresher, colours sharper, and the day begins in a different way.

Staying in a refuge means extending the mountain into the night... and taking home a truly unique memory.

Refuge du Grand Plan

Courchevel Valley

At 2,300 metres in altitude, below the Merlet lakes, Refuge du Grand Plan occupies a renovated former shepherd's shelter in the heart of the Avals valley. The place has retained a sense of simplicity and authenticity, perfectly in tune with its surroundings — bringing you closer to what truly matters: space, calm and relief.

From the plateau, the view stretches from Mont Blanc to the alpine pastures of Grand Plan, all the way to the high-altitude lakes. Here, everything invites you to look up, breathe and take your time.

A simple yet precious high-altitude stop, perfect for extending your day in the heart of the mountains.

Refuge du Saut

Méribel Valley

Less than two hours' walk from Lac de Tuéda in Méribel-Mottaret, Refuge du Saut is easily reached through alpine meadows.

The path climbs gently through scenery that gradually opens onto higher altitudes. An ideal stop to discover multi-day hiking and experience a first night in the mountains.
